A CRICAGO SCRIPTOR IN WARRINGTON.—The following somplimentary notice of this promising young artist of Othosogo, we take from the National Intelligencer of the 2nd instant. It will be gratifying to the numerous friends in our city of Mr. Volk, who is now in Washington, and, as we are informed by the New York Creson, engaged in preparing the model for a marble bust of Mrs. Douglas.

"Attract Authors.—So many natives of the United States have, within a few years past, risen, self-taught, to high emisence in the arts of Sculpture and Patreing, as to establish for our countrymen, we think a peculiar aptitude, or genius, for those departments of art. We have been led to this remark by just larring viewed what we conceive to be a fresh proof of its truth; we allude so a statest of Sensator bouglas, executed by L. W. Velk, a young artist of Cheage. As a work of art, the production seems to us most faithful in all the points of resemblance, assion, and individuality; and its execution is really remarkable, when we recollect that it is the work of a young man, (a native of New York,) who but two or three years ago was a simple, showe cutter in a remote village of Illimois; but, feeling within himself the latent powers of genius, and the aspirations of ambition, he resolved to be an arist, and by energy and perseverance became one. His early strengths and auccassful carner, brief as it has been, form an interesting story, of which we have heard the outline, and may give it to our readers at some moment of more leisure and more spane."

RECONDER'S COURT.—The Recorder's Court came in seasion yesterday for its regular February term. Fully in keeping with the former course of Recorder Wilson in breaking up the professional jurer system, was the statement that the Court had adopted the rule that no juror should not always take it as an excess from a juror.

The charge to the Grand Jury possessed no new features. The clvil decket was disposed of yesterday.

Equally true, eract, philosophic and forcible are three strong theoretic and register portion of the first, and stands or falls with it. If the Constitution had said that any one, held as a slave in any State of this Union, should be a clave still in any other State or Territory and the Rights of Property, elder from them any human Society more excessed in their antiquity than the gray memorials of the serilest civilization, corral with most fine self, these underlies the very foundation of all governments are among the chief inducements to the formation of civil polities; and are set, and by their nature never can be the gift of any prevision of the State Constitution. But I have shown that it carefully guards against any one man to amother, or of a nation to its members. No Constitution, written or customers, gives them, nor can give them, as law and by their nature never can be, the gift of any one man to another, or of a nation to its members. No Constitution, written or our tomary, gives them, nor can give them, no law dreamed of by its makers, or imagined by the several conventions that adopted is. And yet those who contend that the Constitution sancgrants them, nor can grant them. They are not held by fewer of any one but God.

What position, then, do our constitutions and our laws occupy and fill in relation to this great topic of framan interest?

Constitutions and laws recognize this existing fact but do not create; they quale fr and limit the enjoyment, they do not increase it; they sacure by public human authority, and by the sanction of the public faith. They punish reveals to the same extent that the Constitution and laws recognize this existing the public faith. They punish reveals in the parameount law of the Territory, it is of the State. Thus then when that provision of the cernal right, by the united strength of the whole people embodied and exercised under forms of public judicial proceedings; or they recognize and justify the proper us of violence, on the part of the inproper us of violence, on the part of the individual assalled to proceed his property.

outside of and beyond positive law—those things to which his the does not depend upon human grant, or the expressions of human will—those things, title to which is not given by man and which man cannot justly take way those and those only, are the proper-ty intended and spoken of in this clause; and the clause is declaratory of a pre-existing right, restricting all interference with such right, and does not pretent to confer a right which had no prior existence. Without this ciause the right would exist, but the means of cultreing it, or, rather, the means of restraining impertanent suterforence with it, would

Individual members of society may encrosed upon this right in others, hence penal laws to deier from such encrosed ment, or to punish it when accomplished. Governments may seek to deprive the individual chima in whole or in part of this right; hence constitutional provisions to limit and restrain in this regard. his alare is not of universal law, but of partial, in the state from an encruckment, or to limit is when accomplished. Governments a provisions to the individual chims in ole or in part of this right; hence conditional provisions to limit and restrain in this and restrains to be limit and restrain in this and restrains the beautiful or the State from which be escaped, and thereby recognizes him as a person who has violated such local law; as a title outside, it recognizes Slavery simply at arising within the boundaries of the jurisdiction of the State that creates it; as it would be absurd and ridiculous, to contend that it meets or assured that creates it; as it would be absurd and ridiculous, to contend that it is state of a square and above the constitution and of restrain forms from this owner. of the gold has she average range of eight hundred in sine hundred and twenty-fire to eight hundred and twenty-fire to eight hundred and forty-fire. The alloying mestal is silver, as in all cases of native gold. The value of gold in bars, allowing for the silver, is nearly to quite $17.00 per ounce, on the average. It is not so easy to arrive as an average of the gold in grains or ameigam, on account of the variable loss in melting. Until within a recess period it was found that this loss would nake a reduction of about two dollars per ounce on the value above stated; but lately the manipulations at the dinien seem to have bean improving, as is indicated by the loss being reduced to about $1.50 per ounce, and it may ere long; be brought down to one dollar or leas. At present, therefore, the mist value of Kangas gold in grains or amalgam, to speak in general terms, is about $15 on ounce, troy weight. It will be seen by reference to the tables attached to this report, that the amount of gold received from the country just referred to, during the last fiscal year, is quite inconsiderable. But it may be noted that since the close of that year the receipts have increased. The amount received at the min in Philadelphia, up to the date of this report, is $97.055,10.00 to the production will be country in the region of these twenty in the region of the brown received about $10,000 from the suns source. As the Round entitled some about a superior of the foundation of the foundation of the foundation of the foundation of the first superior of the still to some of Evey the pretty girft with their apple cheeks, who haughed and pratted round the foundals? What was the book? Do you suppose it was Livy, or the Greek grammar? No; it was a Norm that you were resulting, you lazy, not very clean, good-for-nothing, sensible boy! It was D'Arraghan locking up General Monk in a box, or almost succeeding in keeping Charles the First's head on. It was the prisoner of the Chateau d'If outling himself out of the sach fifty set under water—(I manison the novels I like best myself—without low er telleting or snything of that sort of nonsense, but containing planty of fighting, escaping, robbery and rescenar—outling himself out of the sack, and swimming to the Island of Montechrists. Not ligs are sweet, but fictions are awester.

Have you ever seen a score of white beard, od, white robed warriors, or grave senion for the city, seated at the gate of Jaffa or Beyrout, and listening to the story-toller reciting his marvels out of Antar or the Arabian Nighte? I was once present when a young gentleman at table put a fart away from him, and add to his neighbor, the Younger Son, (with rather a fattous str). They est sweets in him and the his neighbor, the Younger Son, (with r

"All people who have matural, healthy appoints love sweets; all children, all women, all Eastern people, whose tastes are not corrupted by gluttony and strong drink." And a plateful of ramborrers and commenced the philosopher.
You take the allegory? Novels are sweets.
All people with healthy literary appetites love

He will recognize the novelist's same characters, though they appear in red heeled pumps and altesdepigeos, or the garb of the nineteenth century. He will get weary of sweets, as boys of private schools grow (or used to grow, for I have done growing some little time myself, and the practice may have ended too)—as private school boys used to grow tired of the pudding before their mutton at dinner.

And pray what is the moral of this opologue? The moral I take to be this: the appetite for novels extending to the end of the world;—far away under the Syrian stars, the solemm shelikhs and elders harkening to the post as he worlds.
